Hidden Deficit of Millions InAutoInsuranceRevealed

"the delinquencies committed by those in the active service of the company," says the report. "Indeed, it had only meager knowledge of the policies pursued or of their real results."

"Statements were submitted monthly to the board which were utterly misleading. The company's auditor verified the statement of assets, but did not verify even in the most general way the statement of liabilities."

Desperate measures were taken to keep the company's losses under cover. There were deliberate irregularities in bookkeeping, the investigators disclose, but the glaring rays of a state probe have revealed all these misdoings. Now the question being asked here is who will be punished for placing the savings of many in jeopardy?

At present it seems unlikely any one will be punished. For failing in their efforts to keep the falsification of the company's books under cover, the powerful forces back of the concern are now working to prevent the prosecution of the wrongdoers.

Hugh M. Alcorn, district attorney of Hartford county, who prosecuted Gerald Chapman, has issued no statement regarding his attitude, although the report of the falsification was extensively played up in the Hartford newspapers.

Whether he has decided for or against prosecuting the offenders, therefore, is still a question, but it is no secret that friends of the men involved are trying hard to spread the impression that the falsification of the report was a matter of inefficiency and not a deliberately criminal act.

The powerful interests that are being brought to bear somehow to patch up the scandal without the unpleasantness of prosecutions, seems to have fairly well succeeded in keeping the story from making the rounds of the country, to other large insurance centers and cities where there are investors in the Automobile Insurance Company.

The Associated Press, which is generally regarded a pretty capable and alert news agency, failed to put the hot story on the wires, although the two Hartford papers, the Courant and Times, both members of the Associated Press, gave the story banner lines on their first pages.

As a result of the scandal, C. H. Remington, acting vice-president of the insurance company, has resigned.

H. I. Horton, former insurance expert and now an editor on the Hartford Courant, who knew Mr. Remington for years, was thunderstruck by the disclosures of the state investigating body, and said he could not understand how Remington and the other officers could have permitted the deplorable situation to grow as it did.

The management of the company is severely scored by the state probers in the report of William Corcoran, actuary of the insurance department, to Commissioner Howard P. Dunham, following an exhaustive examination of the books and firm's affairs covering four years, to the extent of $7,215,314 and a deficit of $6,294,203 on the last day of last year.

Made "Preposterous" Deals

"Serious irregularities in the bookkeeping of the company" and a "highly improper procedure" adopted with respect to its liabilities, were reported. That marine insurance deals were made with London companies upon terms as disadvantageous to the Automobile Insurance Company as to be called "preposterous" by underwriting officers of the London company involved, was also revealed. This statement is the result of a special investigation in England made by Edward D. Robbins, special counsel for the insurance department of the state.

It was found, the report says, that, "in various years, certain expenditures were charged to accounts for which no such expenditures were, in fact, made. In certain cases also receipts were so entered as to disguise the fact that corresponding liabilities were created."

Disastrous ocean marine insurance arrangements were made in 1923, when, according to the Insurance Department, "it would have been possible for underwriters of sound judgment to foresee that the immediate future of a marine insurance business was not so promising as to warrant extensive engagements."

THE RETURN OF PETER GRIMM

Posed by Janet Gaynor, Alec Francis, Richard Walling and an Illustrious Cast

ADAPTED FROM THE FAMOUS BELASCO PLAY

His twilight years find benevolent Peter Grimm, plant wizard, wondering who will carry on his name and work after he is gone. Wedded only to his beloved flowers, and parent but to countless new and rare blooms, Peter's life of experiment in his great nurseries has brought him wealth and a contentment dulled only by the realization that he lacks an heir.

Of all the fair flowers in Peter's nurseries the fairest by far is Katherine, his beautiful young ward. As with his tenderest plants, Peter had bestowed his loving care on this glorious flower and had nurtured her to young womanhood, watching over her tenderly, ever since she had been brought to him, years ago, by his old friend, Dr. McPherson.

Peter's musings are interrupted by Katie and Jimmie, son of the head gardener and the constant companion of the girl. As the three study the result of a recent experiment, Peter's thoughts bear fruit in the unspoken decision to send for his nephew, Frederick. A marriage between Frederick and Katie, Peter believes, will solve his problem.

Ignorant of the fact, so evident to every one else, that Katie and Jimmie are head over heels in love with each other. Peter begins to plan her future without taking her into his confidence. He cables to Frederick, who is in Paris, to return home immediately, and sets about to arrange a royal welcome. (To be continued.)
